Description: Core at BIDMC is a physical biorepository of deeply phenotyped human specimens that are linked to clinical diagnoses, a digital databank of omics and histological profiling generated from stored and annotated samples, and a virtual catalogue interface that will facilitate collaborations with the aim to catalyze innovative biomedical research and discovery. Goal of the BioDataBank Core is to build a biobank of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (BIDMC)/BILH patient biospecimens & Omics data from our four Translational Research Hubs that are linked to clinical data for biomedical research directed towards advancing precision medicine. We will diversify the targeted biobank populations by engaging and collaborating with Beth Israel Lahey Health (BILH)-associated community health centers.
