Proper Citation: University of South Alabama Department of Cell Biology and Neuroscience (RRID:SCR_007531)

Description: Offers graduate program and training. Areas include mechanisms of DNA repair, oligodendrocyte development and maturation, functional neuroanatomy, neurophysiology, cellular responses to oxidative stress, kinesin motor proteins and motility, regulation of nuclear transcription, and hormonal regulation of fertility. Program emphasizes understanding of biological principles at the cellular level and training in the anatomical disciplines to ensure success during career development. To achieve these objectives the department participates extensively in the Interdisciplinary Graduate Curriculum which teaches fundamental biological principles during the first year. After the first year, students select a mentor and begin to focus on a significant research topic.
