Description: The Department of Neurosciences is composed of 33 ladder-rank faculty members, 23 research and project scientists, and 27 faculty who hold adjunct and joint appointments. Additionally, there are 61 individuals outside the university who participate in our clinical teaching programs. We are proud that Neurosciences at UCSD ranks first out of 90 competitors in overall NIH grant funding. The Department of Neurosciences also supports adult and pediatric residency training programs in neurology utilizing clinical facilities at the UCSD Medical Centers in Hillcrest and La Jolla, VA San Diego Medical Center, and Rady Children''s Hospital of San Diego. Areas of particular interest include the diagnosis, management, and research of neurodegenerative diseases (in particular Alzheimer''s disease and Parkinson''s disease), stroke, epilepsy, neuromuscular disorders, metabolic disorders, and neuro-developmental disorders, including autism. The Department maintains close ties with its neighboring institutions, including the Salk Institute, Scripps Research Institute, and Burnham Institute. The La Jolla Mesa has the greatest concentration of neuroscientists of any single area in the United States .
