Description: Faculty members of our Department are actively engaged in delivering outstanding teaching to undergraduate students, graduate students, medical students, and residents. Our Doctor of Philosophy (graduate) students matriculate to Pharmacology through the Biomedical Sciences Graduate Program at the Quillen College of Medicine. Students pursuing Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy degrees may pursue a focus in Toxicology. Our faculty members are trained in several medical disciplines and our research applies methodological approaches that span molecular biology, cellular biology, systems biology, and human biology and pathology. Through research, our department strives to understand human disease pathology and use this understanding to develop new therapeutic entities (e.g. drugs) for the treatment of major human diseases. The primary foci of department research efforts are cardiovascular and neuropsychiatric diseases, although other areas of interest and activity exist. Our laboratories are funded by the National Institutes of Health, American Heart Association, the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention and a variety of other agencies and sources.
