Proper Citation: Chicken Gene Nomenclature Consortium (RRID:SCR_004966)

Description: International group of researchers interested in providing standardized gene nomenclature for chicken genes. A Chicken Gene Annotation Tool is available from CGNC-UK which assigns chicken nomenclature based on predicted orthology to human genes. The CGNC-US database includes CGNC-UK information and adds manually biocurated from biocurators and interested contributors. A Human Chicken Ortholog Predictions Search is available. Both resources are part of a united CGNC effort and nomenclature data is shared and co-ordinated between these two resources. They strongly encourage researchers with domain knowledge to participate in this nomenclature effort by requesting a login and providing gene nomenclature for their genes of interest. Please contact them for further information or assistance. The AGNC works in conjunction with public resources such as NCBI and Ensembl and in consultation with existing nomenclature committees, including the Chicken Gene Nomenclature Committee (CGNC). The Avian and Chicken nomenclature efforts are co-ordinated and chicken data is shared between these two groups.
