Description: An official Digital Object Identifier (DOI) Registration Agency of the International DOI Foundation launched as a cooperative effort among publishers to enable persistent cross-publisher citation linking in online academic journals. The citation-linking network today covers over 65 million journal articles and other content items (books chapters, data, theses, technical reports) from thousands of scholarly and professional publishers around the globe. CrossRef does not aggregate full-text content but rather, it uses a system of distributed aggregation whereby full-text content is linked through a database consisting of minimal publisher metadata. Each record in the database is essentially a triplet: (metadata + URL+DOI). In addition to assigning DOIs to scholarly content, CrossRef has additional services: * Cited-By Linking * CrossRef Metadata Services * CrossCheck plagiarism screening (powered by iThenticate) * CrossMark update identification service * FundRef Funder identification service
