Description: If Occupational Therapy, Pharmacy, or Physical Therapy is not just a career choice for you - if it's a calling - then you may belong at Creighton University. For our students, it's about more than career training. It's about serving patients. Restoring health. Changing lives. Health care is a serious career, perhaps a lifelong calling. Creighton seeks the cream of the crop for these programs - men and women who feel a genuine calling to serve patients, restore health, and save lives. There's more for you in Omaha than a vibrant university community. It's true that U.S. News & World Report lists us as among the best colleges in the Midwest. And that we've been educating health professionals for more than a century. We're also home to one of the world's leading medical communities. That means training in leading edge facilities and in one of the nation's best teaching hospitals. Perhaps our greatest distinction, however, is our university-wide commitment to creating an ever better and more just world. You'll find our PT doctoral students staffing a free clinic for the underserved our pharmacy students conducting drug and alcohol education seminars ... and our OT students volunteering for the Special Olympics. It's all tied to the values we strive toward as a Jesuit institution.
