Proper Citation: Wyss Institute Machine Shop / 3D Prototyping Core (RRID:SCR_010212)

Description: The Core's capabilities include six Computer Numerical Control (CNC) milling centers (one of which is a five-axis micro-milling machine), two 3D printers, a waterjet cutter, a laser cutter, and a sinker Electrical Discharge Machining (EDM) tool. The Core has three full time machinists with experience in both industrial and academic machine shops, creating prototypes for varied applications. In addition to fabrication, these experts help researchers during the design phase, enabling development from a simple concept into real prototypes.
