Proper Citation: Argonne National Laboratory Labs and Facilities (RRID:SCR_011062)

Description: Argonne National Laboratory, located just outside of Chicago, is one of the U.S. Department of Energy's largest national laboratories for scientific and engineering research to solve most important challenges in energy, environment and national security. Programmatic activities cover all aspects of innovation ecology including basic research, technology development and prototype development and testing. We regularly work with industry through exclusive licensing, joint research and variety of other mechanisms to transfer our inventions to marketplace.
