Description: The primary mission of the Quillen College of Medicine is to educate future physicians, especially those with an interest in primary care, to practice in underserved rural communities. In addition, the College is committed to excellence in biomedical research and is dedicated to the improvement of health care in Northeast Tennessee and the surrounding Appalachian Region. Degrees of Study include Doctor of Medicine, Master of Science, and Doctor of Philosophy; CME''s are also offered in many forms including videos and podcasts. The Quillen College of Medicine endeavors to meet community and regional health needs by identification, creation, and execution of the necessary programs through utilization of its diverse resources. The college is a major health care provider for East Tennessee. In view of this responsibility, the college emphasizes primary care as the focus of medical practice and training programs. The primary care physician is defined as the physician of first and continuing contact, coordinating the entire care of the patient. Primary medical care is a function rather than a discipline. This care is provided by family physicians, general internists, general pediatricians, and obstetricians / gynecologists. In addition to meeting the clinical and service responsibilities, the college also supports a significant research endeavor. The Quillen College of Medicine has an experienced and qualified faculty in the biological, behavioral, and clinical sciences. In addition to the full-time faculty, a number of practicing physicians in the community participate in the educational process as both part-time and volunteer faculty. Average Class Size: 60 (medical class) Significant Accolades: U.S.News & World Report - 2010 American''s Best Graduate Schools: 7th in nation for rural medicine 17th in nation for family medicine education Major Educational Emphasis: Primary Care, Rural Medicine Major Research Programs: Cardiovascular Disease, Primary Care, Immunology, Infectious Diseases
