Description: THIS RESOURCE IS NO LONGER IN SERVICE, documented August 29, 2016. So far there is only limited knowledge about possible genetic influences in acute spinal cord injuries (SCI). In this project DNA is collected prospectively from persons with SCI admitted to the acute SCI rehabilitation unit of the Karolinska University Hospital. Trauma is the cause of injury in a majority of the patients. Other causes of injury are spinal abscesses, tumors or spinal infarctions. The aim of the project is to create a sufficiently large DNA biobank with samples from 200-400 individuals from clinically well characterized patients to allow for studies of association between candidate genes and clinical outcome parameters.
