Description: Software for an open, distributed system for managing biological information that supports biological research data workflows from the source (i.e. the measurement instruments) to facilitate the process of answering biological questions by means of cross-domain queries against raw data, processed data, knowledge resources and its corresponding metadata. The openBIS software framework can be easily extended and has been customized for the following technologies: * High Content Screening * Proteomics * Deep Sequencing * Metabolomics

Abbreviations: openBIS

Synonyms: open Biology Information System

Resource Type: software resource
